FOREWORD

With the publication of Volume Four, the UCLA Women's Law Journal implemented two important policies, bringing this journal out of the start-up phase, with all of its hurdles, and into maturity as a professional and timely publication.

For the first time, the UCLA Women's Law Journal will publish two issues in one volume. With this volume, the Journal has established a new production schedule, publishing issues in December and May. We are pleased to present this December issue, the first of our new production schedule. Also, in keeping with the founding board of the UCLA Women's Law Journal,¹ we have instituted a Diversity Advisory Committee to maintain diversity within feminist legal scholarship. Composed of consulting editors from other student organizations and journals at the UCLA School of Law, the Diversity Advisory Committee assists in the goal of providing a more inclusive feminist jurisprudence, including the voices of women of color, lesbians, disabled women, and poor women.

These advances would not be possible without the dedication and support of many people at the UCLA School of Law. The Volume Four editorial board and staff have worked extremely hard this year in an effort to reach these goals, and we recognize their effort and commitment. We also thank Dean Susan Westerberg Prager and Chief Financial & Administrative Officer John Power. They have been instrumental in getting the Women's Law Journal on electronic databases and helping the journal with administrative and financial matters. Our advisors Christine Littleton and Frances Olsen have also been helpful beyond their call, both in creative problem solving and in active solicitation of submissions.
